Warrenton.
Warrenton is a town famous in the history of our land prior to the war as the route to the far famed Fauquier White Sulphur Springs, situated about six miles directly south of the place. Warrenton contains about 2,500 inhabitants; among the number most noted (for it may be well to state that there are many famous men in this county; famous in war and peace) are the present representation in Congress from this district, the Hon. Eppa Hunton, ex Governor William Smith, better known as "Extra Billy," now verging on to 80, who since the war returned to plow like Cincinnatus, and on his 40-acre farm, just adjoining the town, has tried more experiments than any man in Virginia, and many of them without success. I cannot refrain from telling you an anecdote about the old Governor without doing violence to his memory. On a recent home from the war he found his farm, like many others, in a dilapidated condition, and set about to repair things generally, and make two blades of grass grow where one had grown before. He had a field from which the soldiers had cut the trees, but left the stumps. Now, as some inventive genius had made a machine to pull up stumps, our new-fledged model farmer must get a stump machine, at a cost of about $300, say five dollars for each stump, and the very first stump he tried to pull up was more than a match for his machine and broke it to pieces. An old countryman advised the Governor to try a little "coal-oil and fire," which resulted in the destruction of the offensive stumps at an insignificant cost. His cow house, stable and agricultural implement house are all curiosities in their way, and are models of improved farming on an expensive, if not a very remunerative, plan. I told you, like Cincinnatus, the old Governor had taken to the plow, rising at four and working with as much zest on his pet farm as though he were engaged in some grand political struggle which had heretofore characterized his life, and last fall, in looking around them for a representative to the Legislature, the people in their need turned to their old friend and leader, and called him from his place to a seat in the councils of the State. The old gentleman was all the vigor of a man of thirty.

Among the new settlers for we have carpenter, two of them, are Gen. Pendleton and Gen. J. N. Bethune. The latter was the owner of Blind Tom, the musical genius (who, by the way, is as fond of General B.'s family as he knows how). He, too, is a good farmer, devoting most of his energies to stock raising. Gen. Wm. H. Payne, a Confederate officer of distinction, lives in the town and practices law in this and the surrounding counties. Judge Jas. Keith, the circuit judge, is also a resident of the town, and a partner in the banking house of Payne & Co. The judge is a fine man, and considered by the bar of the circuit as eminently qualified to fill the position he holds.

Warrenton is reached by a branch road nine miles long, from the Virginia Midland road at Warrenton Junction, but known in Uncle Sam's postoffice directory under the euphonious title of Owl Run. They are connected by Franklyn's lightning express, as it is dubbed by the mountaineers from the adjoining county of Rappahannock, who come hither with their teams well laden with the rich produce of another earth to ship over this line to Alexandria and Washington. They give this title because of the conductor, a genial fellow, named Franklyn, who would not for the world offend the owners of fast horse flesh in Fauquier by making time more rapid than the noted blooded steeds of the county and his general politeness in stopping to pick up and put down old ladies and multitudes of parcels at each farm on his route. These traits, added to the fact his line was never known to miss connection, has made him famous along the whole line of the Midland road. The town contains many handsome residences, some twenty or thirty stores, of the style usually kept in the country; Episcopal, Catholic, Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian Churches; also, a coach factory, foundry and several other manufacturing enterprises on a small scale. A large business is done here as the surrounding country is very rich and produces a fine yield of corn, wheat, oats, etc., but the farmers of Fauquier are, I am pleased to learn, turning their attention to grazing and farming from the fact of the Midland road. Since the war the town has been so unfortunate as to lose both of its hotels—the Warren Green and the Warrenton—by fire. The former is now being rebuilt by Mr. Maddox, who hopes to be able to receive summer boarders by the first or middle of June. In speaking of the enterprise of the town I must not forget to mention that it contains as good a weekly paper as is published in the State—the Index, by Ficks & Caldwell. It is true that the local journal is indicative of the prosperity (or want of it) of a county. I think one might judge from the paper that Fauquier was in a flourishing condition.

Fauquier county has a number of other villages, the principal of which are The Plains, Salem, Beaton and Midland. The latter is a new colony of Northern people, settled by the Land Agency of the Virginia Midland Railroad, and consists of a 1,500-acre farm cut up into subdivisions of from twenty to eighty acres and sold to actual settlers, on long credits and easy terms. The colony, I am glad to learn, is in a flourishing condition.

Today was court day here. A County Court in Virginia is well worth attending for the purpose of studying human nature. In the court of Chief Justice Marshall, by Washington. It is said to be an admirable likeness, and is about the only thing attractive in the room. There is at this point a finely kept cemetery of the Confederate dead, who sleep their long sleep, while living women yearly scatters flowers on their tombs. An elegant monument has been erected to their memory. The cemetery and monument are both witnesses of the energy of Miss Mary A. Smith, daughter of the Governor, who has the same determination which knows no such word as fail, as her father, and to her untiring exertions is mainly due this beautiful camp ground of the dead.

Col. Robert Beverly, of the Plains, is probably the largest land owner, and I expect the richest man in Fauquier. He owns in one tract 9,000 acres of land, which he farms on an extensive scale, and in a most successful manner. He grazes largely, and ships yearly large numbers of cattle. The Colonel is a member of the Executive Committee of the State Agricultural Society.

There are many fine farms in the county. I will simply mention that of Bolling Robertson, esq., at Broad Run Station, on the Manassas road, and W. J. Mason's farm at Warrenton Junction. The latter is a farm well worth visiting. Mr. Mann devotes himself principally to fine stock (he also raises excellent crops). His dairy of twenty-five Alderney cows is very remunerative, as I learn he gets about three gallons of milk per day from each cow, and from this three gallons of milk one gallon of cream, which makes him two pounds of "gilt-edge butter," for which he finds a ready sale in Baltimore. At this season, for seventy-five cents per pound. Fauquier has gold mines from which, prior to the war, the precious metal was taken, and they are still worked, as they pay tolerably well. I remember, when a boy, visiting the mines and seeing the quartz crushed by the heavy roller and the separation of the small amount of precious metal from the big amount of dirt, etc. Fauquier has not been gold for her minerals, being content with her gold, her springs, her good crops, her cattle, and her great men; but who knows that in her old mines a "big bonanza" awaits the developments of the future?—Correspondence of the Washington Chronicle.
